Trading Standards have told us that a number of residents have been called on their landline from a fake 01225 number, claiming to be from the Government. The automated voice said that the Government is instructing them to wear a facemask and to press a number on the keypad to make a purchase. Fortunately the residents have recognised this as a scam.

Although these calls were made to residents in the Bath area at present, it is likely that this will become far more widespread and will no doubt include our area. Please remain alert to any potential scam calls.

We have been alerted by a Neighbourhood Watch scheme of a scam email that claims to be from Tesco saying that "You Are Our Winner". It doesn't say what you have won, but asks you to click on a link to confirm your identity. Please don't click on these links as you may download a virus onto your computer. At the very least it will try and get your personal details. The email comes from a company in Kentucky in the United States.

As with any email you get unexpectedly from someone you don't know, delete this message without clicking on any of the links
